Other training-related issues to consider

Do you have back-up staff that can replace employees who are identified as key staff in the operation of the CACFP? How quickly can you train new staff in the duties of the CACFP should you experience staff turnover? Do your position descriptions for key CACFP staff include their duties/responsibilities expected in the operation of the CACFP? (Accurate or timely completion of the CACFP duties could be included as part of a performance evaluation).

Sponsors of multi-sites must ensure that all key functions identified to operate the CACFP are assigned to specific staff members and that these key staff are knowledgeable of program requirements and fully understand their specific duties and responsibilities. All “key staff” must receive annual training related to the CACFP operations.

In addition—civil rights training

Remember, all sponsors of the CACFP must provide civil rights training to all “front-line” staff. Frontline staff area all persons with CACFP responsibilities, including volunteers, who interact with program applicants or participants, and the persons who supervise the frontline staff. Training should be given to all new hires before they begin their job duties, and with all staff annually thereafter. Documentation should remain on file at the sponsor’s office listing the dates of the trainings, names of those trained, and a brief agenda of training topics.
